SPECIAL PARISH INFORMATION AND ARCHDIOCESAN EVENTS

The story goes, At long last the winter was over and the Spring had come. A warm sunshine brilliantly shone from a clear blue sky. All along the street the people rejoiced. They drew back their curtains and opened their windows. Fresh air, sunlight and warmth portered into their homes bringing gladness to the hearts of all inside. Even the very old felt that it was good to be alive, and exclaimed,

"Thank God for Spring and the approach of Summer! Thank God for the sunshine and for warmth!"

Just then a beggar man appeared at the end of the street. He was quickly spotted through the windows. Then, one by one down the length of the street, the windows were quickly closed, the curtains drawn, and the locks put back on the front of the doors. The old beggar man was a patient man and had plenty of time to spare. He knocked on every door on the street, but not one door opened to him. No one invited him inside to drink a cup of tea. No one bothered to come out and exchange a friendly word with him. When he reached the end of the street, he turned away and made for the next street to try his luck there. No sooner had he disappeared than the curtains were pulled back again, and the windows opened once more. And again, the sunshine and fresh air poured in, and the rejoicing recommenced. The locks from the doors were removed and here and there neighbours came out to exchange friendly greetings, for they were a very clannish lot, and prided themselves of this fact.

Strange when you think about it...our homes are always open to receive God's sunshine and fresh air, but alas not always open to receive the stranger, especially if he or she comes dressed in shabby clothes or different to the norm. Yet, even in this case, he or she is still a child of God who lets his sunshine on each one of us, irrespective of whether we deserve it. Granted that hospitality is a very much different matter from what it was two decades ago or so. Yet today, despite all our advances as a people there is more need than ever for hospitality and friendliness. Christ calls us to reach out to the stranger. Jesus, as the itinerant prophet was considered as a stranger and he relied upon the hospitality of those who had become "established and landed". Hospitality is the hallmark of a disciple of Christ, it is not an optional extra. It is the very heart of the Gospel. The ultimate motivation is clear: to welcome the stranger is to welcome Christ himself. Contacting God must inevitably lead to contacting others. Anne Frank wrote, "In spite of everything I still believe that people are good at heart." A strong person isn't afraid of people who are different from himself. A wise man welcomes them. By shutting them out he denies himself the riches of other people's experience. He starves his mind and hardens his heart. When a wise man names his brothers and sisters, he draws no circle smaller than the first one ever drawn on this earth. In the beginning God gave the earth its shape. He made it round. He included everybody. So, should we.
